

When the League of American Bicyclists released its annual rankings of bicycle-friendly states, it singled Maine out for its “steady rise” through the rankings. Maine this year was second only to Washington state, after the advocacy group evaluated comprehensive questionnaires filled out by Department of Transportation bicycle coordinators across the nation. The lowest-ranked state was West Virginia.

Even though Maine is considered among the safest states for bicycle safety, accidents do occur when drivers fail to be alert to the presence of bicyclists on the roadways. Lowry & Associates helps bicyclists who have been injured in an accident.